WEST WASHINGTON.

At the meeting of the Citizens' Equitable Buncing Association last night at Goddard's Hall. Profersor Frishe was chosen vice-president, and Mr. C. P. Williams was elected secretary, as Mr. King declined election on account of pressure of business. A motion by Mr. Mend that the entire directory be declared vacant was lost as the regular election would take place in April. Everything is now harmonious, and confidence has been completely restored. The president stated this morning that the affairs of the association were in a most prosperous condition, and the surplus funds were all invested in good solid real estate. The best evidence of the restored confidence is the extent and alacrity with which payments of back dues, etc., were made. All fines for non-payment of dues last month were remitted on condition that they pay up immediately for the last and the present ments. This had a wonderful effect upon the tool holders, and but the scretary and that teasurer were kept very busy for some time, as the receipts amounted to about the treasurer were kept very busy for some time, as the receipts amounted to about $2,000, which was far beyond the hopes of the most enthusiastic members.

ment This Week. The "Comedy of Errors" at Albaugh' Opera-House was a surprise as well as a pleasure to all who witnessed it last night. The text has been tearranged so that the and incidental changes have been made to admit of greater scenic display. The magnificent scenery and beautiful costume and incidental changes have been made to admit of greater scenic display. The magnificent scenery and beautiful costumes showed the careful study of an artist. Nothing was omitted that could enhance the general effect of the comedy. Robson and Crane as the Two Dromios are known here from former presentations. The company is a strong one, splendidly adapted to the play. The two datishidaese were well done by Messre. Harris and Handyside. Miss Selma Fetter as Advinue acted with spirit, and possesses a pleasing voice and manner. The comedians are to be congustulated upon the splendor of their revival of this play, which has never been equaled in this country. The same bill will continue through the entire week.

Miss Fanny Davenport drew a splendid house at the National Theatre last night. Her reappearance as Fedora was looked forward to as one of the events of the dramatic season. Her intelligent portrayat of the passions has long since placed her among the foremost of American actresses, and this reputation she fully sustained last night. Mr. Mantell, the principal man in the support, acquitted laimself in his usually excellent manner. The stage setting of the drama was the most beautiful that has ever been attempted in this city outside of spectacular plays. A beautiful piece of scenic effect was introduced in the second act. The scene is the drawing-room of a chateau in France. The walls and backgrounds are gorgeous designs of gold and ourt maroon, the pillars of bronze; portieres of heavy velvet with light satin drapery. The uphelstery is blue plush and gilt. The costumes of the players were very elegant. Old theatre-goers say that it was the finest piece of scenic of scenic which is built around a specialty, and whose only cause for existences to annue. In this, however, it is antiput in "Oh, What a Night." The play is one of those efforts which is built around a specialty, and whose only cause for existences to annue. In this, however, it is eminetally successful if uproarious and continual laughter is any ment. The central figure is, of course, Gus Williams, whose comic eccentricities and remarkable dialect had full sway last night. The company is good and affords plenty of fun for all who will brave the weather to get it.

Herzog's Opera-House was crowded last night with a fashionable audience, who came to see Miss Maud Grauger as Cora in "Article 47." The talent of this lady is recognized, and in her rendition of the difficult part of Cora added new laurels to her fame. Her costuming is rich and elegant, and won the admiration as well as the envy of the ladies present. She is well as the envy of the ladies present. She is well supported, Miss Olive West being conspicuous for her natural and easy method. Miss West appears in the leading part in "Engaged" this afternoon, and on Thursday and Friday afternoons, while Miss Granger will hold the boards at the other performances during the week. These opportunities for seeing a good play well acted should not be missed.

Now that Mr. Gowen has been elected president of Reading the next question of interest is "What will he do with it." There is any amount of goasip about the matter. Many hold that he can do nothing that the receivers will brook no hiereference, but these who knew Mr. Gowen's tireless energy will not believe that he will submit to such a state of things. His resolutions introduced at yesterday's meeting show that he will take no passive part, but will appeal to the courts for relief from the present receivers, whose management, he says, has produced a debt of eleven millions without a million dollars' worth of property to show for it, a piece of financiering unparalleled in raffrond history. It is also said that be will bend his energies to raising a sufficient sum of money to pay off the present general mortgage, principal and interest, at par, and that he already has $5,600,000 promised him. He also expects to be able to pay $2,500,000 of the floating debt, and release some valuable collateral. The Gulches Full of Gentlemen. Rough fellows of the olden time! There where the Bret Harte idea crops out. The fellows of the olden time were not rough fellows, but on the contrary those old fellows who came here first were the bravest and most chivalrous men on earth. They would not have started to come had they not been brave. And very many of them were men of education and well read (not cultivated as things go now), although sometimes some of those gentlemen did not wear fine clothes. William M. Stewart, whacking a buil team up in these mountains, was a man of as much brains, courtesy and bravery as when he sat in the United States Senate. John Bigler, when rolling barrels on the Sacramento leves was as good a man as when John Bigler was Governor of California; John R. McConnell, when he had on one boot and one old shoe and was ragged as to the rear of his trousers, and while he was "toting" shakes to the top of a cabin in Nevada City, was then as line a scholar as this State can boast of to-day, and he was as learned and polite and as considerate then as when he afterward graced the State's office of Attorney-General. We could specify many other instances of learned men working at day's work in the olden time. The guiches in this country were filled with scholars and gentlemen who were fighting for fortune with picks and shovels. These men had petter the manners nor the language attributed to them by the writers of alleged California stories.—[Grass Valley (Col.) Tidings. cultivated as things go now), although
